Paranoia?

12:26:33 PM from Shelly Longoria to All Participants:
Are there any examples of parental permission forms to post teens' images/videos online?

12:29:05 PM from Dana Stemig to All Participants:
Server space was brought up as an issue but if we store online we fix that.

12:29:08 PM from Amanda Hatfield to All Participants:
Some of the challenges that I had was getting the teens interested in them

12:29:27 PM from Janelle Mercer to All Participants:
I always have problems coming up with ideas...creativity is an issue for me.

12:29:35 PM from Sandi Palmer to All Participants:

Are there any copyright restrictions showing book trailers in the library that you find online?

12:29:42 PM from Dana Stemig to All Participants:

i have trouble getting teachers to work on these.

12:29:49 PM from Delia Swanner to All Participants:

Getting teens to read a book to make a trailer

12:30:15 PM from eileen oshea to All Participants:

But making the trailer would provide the incentive to read the book.

12:30:19 PM from Dana Stemig to All Participants:

The video can be the hook to get them to read.

12:30:44 PM from Susan Fisher to All Participants:

Have teen read short, children's book and do trailer for the kids

12:31:11 PM from Jennifer Boyce to All Participants:

Can give community service credit for making book trailer reviews.

12:52:23 PM from Shelly Longoria to All Participants:
where did you say the permission slip example could be found?

12:52:33 PM from Dana Stemig to All Participants:
No question. Just a comment. If you have server space, you can upload videos to Destiny.

12:52:35 PM from Celeste Steward to All Participants:
VErY interesting presentation! Do you know some other ways that libraries use book trailers?

12:52:38 PM from Wendy Saz to All Panelists:
PLEASE permissions forms!

12:59:15 PM from Dana Stemig to All Participants:

I create playlists in youtube. Many publishers are doing book trailers. Also some books have QR code links on the back of the cover.

12:59:29 PM from Delia Swanner to All Participants:

Much thanks!

12:59:52 PM from Clare Murphy to All Panelists:

Thanks! good to see other ideas than just a staff-created book review.

13:00:03 PM from Dana Stemig to All Participants:

I hadn't thought about making my own QR codes for them. Good idea.
