

Lettycia Terrones:For tribal libraries, what are some of the documents that people have shared?
Also who writes the text that compliments documents (liek in the SFPL example)

Mary Boyle:What is a cms?

Erin:Mary - Content Management System

Mary Boyle:I am at Santa Clara, CA but worked at Memorial Library and got my degree at UW-Madison

Mary Boyle:Mineral Point is where my relatives live

Erin:Awesome, Mary!! Sometimes I miss UW Madison... then I remember snow... lol

Mary Boyle:I prefer snow at a distance

Erin:Lol - ditto

Lettycia Terrones:I am interested in what community contributes as far as documents to include, for instance photogrpahs, oral stories, clothing, school documents etc

Lettycia Terrones:and then once archive docs are contributed, who writes the text that describes the doc on your website. so like in Mapping World Fair 1915, who writes the compementing text that goes with each picture or map image?

Elizabeth 2:Do you see this as always being a free account?

Melissa:Yea! LVA!

Colyn Wohlmut:What are the supported text file types?

Bree McGaffey:So, we could have the same photo pinned in two seperate collections if they deal with two different subjects?

Daniel Burniston:Will the recording of this presentation be made available?

Colyn Wohlmut:OK, thanks.

Mary Augugliaro - Infopeople:Yes. The webinar archive along with the chat transcript will be available here <https://infopeople.org/civicrm/event/info?reset=1&id=655>

Daniel Burniston:Thanks!

Bree McGaffey:Thanks!!

Mary Boyle:If we restrict reuse, are you able to protect it?

Mary Boyle:Can people take it against our wishes easily?

Mary Boyle:thanks

Mary Boyle:What is CSV?

Jonathan W:Thanks for the information, I have to leave early to open our history room.

Bree McGaffey:This is a wonderful idea for communities! I have to dash a little early due to closing time EST, but will watch the rest when it is archived. Thanks!!

Mary Boyle:Thank you!

Louisa V:Thank you! Very interesting.

Joline Buechler:Thank you

Erin:Thank you! This is cool - I'm already sending up an email to our communications team to see what we might have to add :)
